AMERICAN HEROES

Pfc. Kay E. Eubanks, La Grange, N. C., awarded a Medal of Honor posthumously, died after charging to attack a Jap with his rifle in a machine gun and mortar nest. Going to the relief of a platoon isolated by the enemy in Dutch New Guinea, he crawled to the Nips' position, was wounded and his rifle crippled, but charged in, swinging. After a shot dropped Eubanks, his squad killed 41 and effected the relief. War Bonds help equip such heroes. U. S. Treasury Department

Hidden Source of Data for German Is Bared by Treasury Probe.

WASHINGTON, D. C. — For 93 years New Yorkers filed past the musty little bookshop of B. Westermann in midtown Manhattan, stopping perhaps to browse over its sidewalk bookstalls or to buy a first edition. Now it is closed, and the treasury has told why, says the Associated Press.

For 15 years—since 1926—it was one of Germany's most valuable sources of United States military information, telling the Germans what kind of guns this country was making, how fast American planes would fly, how big a hole an American bomb could make in the Wilhelmstrasse.

Uncover Nazi Connections.

These activities came to light in June, 1941, when the treasury stopped out-of-the-country mailing of books and other literature. Westermann's asked special permission to continue mailings.

The treasury did some investigating and this was the story it unraveled:

Ernest Eisele, president of the company, was a native German and a naturalized American citizen as were three of the directors.

The treasury found, too, that since 1926 the firm had lost $25,000 annually but that Eisele had received from German stockholders bonuses totaling $30,000.

It was in 1926 also, he told the treasury, that he had joined the firm. He had been approached by a man he did not identify and asked if he would undertake the reorganization of Westermann's, which was being taken over by the Scherl Publishing company of Germany.

Sends Aviation Magazine.

The treasury uncovered the fact that the Scherl company was controled by Alfred Hugenberg, who had been general manager of the Krupp plants during World War I and was Hitler's first minister of economics and agriculture. Later Joseph Goebbels' propaganda agency acquired the Scherl interests.

Westermann's task, the treasury said, was to send such periodicals as the Aero Digest, other aviation magazines, the Coast Artillery Journal, radio craft magazines, and, in general, anything pertaining to mechanics or the military.

Disposition of the Germans involved was not disclosed by the treasury, which said their cases had been turned over to federal enforcement authorities for action.

A department of justice spokesman said Eisele and the company had been indicted in the District of Columbia last January for failure to register as alien agents.

Home From War, Seaman Bumps Into More Gunfire

LOS ANGELES, CALIF. — A young sailor, six times wounded and wearing two rows of campaign ribbons, came home after two years of battle to meet gunfire in the streets of Los Angeles recently and his 18-year-old bride was wounded by a bandit's bullet.

The $100 they had saved for a honeymoon was gone, taken by the masked holdup man who accosted 19-year-old Nolan Truman Marks, and his wife.

Marks gave fight and the gunman fired twice, one of the bullets lodging just above Mrs. Marks' knee. Still weak from a wound requiring 12 stitches over his heart, and which kept him in a New York hospital, Marks "blacked out."

At the hospital, where his wife was taken, Marks said, "To think that I sweated two years—for this."

Radio Helps Close Jaw Of Fisherman Out at Sea

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—The medical officer of an Alaskan coast guard base used remote control to snap into place the jaw of a fisherman which had looked wide open.

The fisherman was on a small boat 200 miles at sea.

The coast guard said here that faint signals of distress were picked up by Guy B. Delp, radio operator at the remote Alaskan base, who informed Lt. (j. g.) Harry F. Knack, Clinton, Iowa, of the emergency.

Dr. Knack placed Executive Officer Lt. (j. g.) Edward Nugent of Bad Axe, Mich., before the radio operator and went through the manipulations of resetting the jaw.

Delp tapped out a description of each motion to the receiver on the fishing boat and the word soon came back "Instructions carried out. Man now O. K."

A Midnight Ham Buyer Pays and Apologizes

SAVANNAH, GA. — An "honest" burglar, with a craving for meat, was a nocturnal visitor at William F. Mullis' grocery store. The burglar took two slices of ham and left 65 cents on the counter. The intruder also left Mullis a note: "I would not have done this but I was meat hungry. You will find the money on the counter, every penny of it." It was signed "A Good Friend."

Contrary Behavior Marks Conduct of Comanches

Among the Comanche Indians were the "contrary ones" who made a fetish of doing everything backwards, says a study of "The Psychological Frontiers of Society" by Abram Kardiner. "Contrary, backward behavior is common among Plains Indian tribes and frequently goes with membership in men's war societies of high rank, usually named Crazy Horse Societies. There was no such society among the Comanche, but there were 'contrary' individuals.

"These 'contrary ones' smeared themselves with ashes or white paint and kept up their backward behavior around camp all the time. When it was cold they complained of the heat and took off their clothes. They were continually playing practical jokes.

"Once an old woman asked a 'contrary one' to get her a buffalo robe. He said, 'No. I want the equivalent of saying he would. He disappeared for several days and then brought back the skin of a Pawnee which he hung over the fence in front of the old woman's lodge. The skin scared the old woman when she came out in the twilight and saw it. Other people said, 'Didn't you have sense enough not to ask a contrary one to do anything for you? They are always joking.'"

Canadian Railway

During the five years and four months of war, from the beginning of September, 1939, to December 31, 1944, the Canadian National Railway System carried on a gigantic work for the people of Canada and their Allies. Train miles traveled during the period, freight and passenger, aggregated more than 230 million. Measured in car miles, the total is nearly 10 billion. Freight amounted to more than 433 million tons. More than 132 million passengers were carried—greater than 10 times the entire population of Canada. More than four million troops were transported, requiring 6,540 special trains. Special trains for war industry workers carried 27 million passengers. Canadian National dining cars served an average of nearly 1,000 meals a day, a total of more than 21 million. The company's 12 hotels accommodated more than three million guests. Upwards of 14 million hotel meals were served. Purchases made by the railway amounted to considerably more than $500,000,000.

Mixing Proteins

Plant protein is not as complete as animal protein because it does not contain all the material needed for tissue building and repair. But in many dishes, one protein can supplement another, and the resulting dishes will be high in nutrients. For example, a bowl of cereal and milk contains both plant and animal protein, the animal protein in the milk supplementing the cereal. The same is true of meat and vegetable stews, macaroni and cheese, milk and egg custard corn pudding, and other dishes of this sort. A little high-quality protein raises the value of the cereal and vegetable prepared with it. The thing to do in this emergency is to spread out the animal proteins, adding them in small amounts to the more plentiful proteins from plant foods.

Nail Polish

Use nail polish to touch up chips on your enameled dish pan, mark kitchen gadgets taken picnicking, repair the rubber dish drainer where the rubber has worn through and rust has started, and to make stiff new tips for fuzzy shoelace ends. Colorless nail polish coated on purses, belts, cigaret cases and compacts keeps them looking new and shiny and prevents costume jewelry and watches from leaving telltale marks on the skin. Buttons which have lost their luster in laundering come back glossy as new with the help of colorless polish.

Quick Cooking Saves Vegetable Nutrients

The greatest loss of nutrients results from improper cooking, says Dr. Cially vitamin C since it is readily soluble in water, according to Extension nutritionists. Vegetables should be cooked quickly so as to prevent loss. If vegetables are cut in pieces for cooking they should be cut lengthwise, as less nutrients bleed out than when cut crosswise. Acids in citrus fruits and tomatoes protect ascorbic acid (vitamin C) from total destruction. Soda destroys this vitamin; therefore, it should never be used in vegetables or soups.

Fresh vegetables should be started cooking in boiling water (if any is used), or at a high temperature. If no water is used, vegetables should be turned over at first to prevent scorching and to cook uniformly, but they should be exposed to air as little as possible for example, tender greens, such as spinach, cabbage and others.

The best methods for cooking vegetables to prevent loss of vitamin C as well as some other vitamins and minerals are: Steaming, baking and boiling in a small amount of water, the amount depending on age and tenderness of vegetables. Recent nutrition resarch has shown that potatoes lose less vitamin C when steamed or boiled, in the skins, than when baked.

Find Sunshine Affects Vitamin C in Tomatoes

Sunlight influences the amount of vitamin C in tomatoes, an important source of this vitamin, research workers have discovered. Several years ago the scientists set out to discover the causes of the variations in vitamin C content of tomatoes. They soon found that different varieties of tomatoes had different amounts of vitamin C, but variations occurred that could not be accounted for in this way. Differences in soil were next suspected of being responsible, but attempts to show that certain soils produced tomatoes with more vitamin C than others failed.

In a repetition of one experiment it was noted that the locations where fruits high in vitamin C were produced the first time were not invariably those which gave high values the second time. The problem was then taken to the laboratory, and tests were made in which all factors that might influence vitamin C content, such as temperature, illumination, moisture supply and mineral nutrients supply, were carefully controlled. Illumination was found to be the determining factor in vitamin C content of tomatoes.

IN MEMORY of T.- Sgt. Thomas Alvin Trent, who died in France January 21, 1945, and who would have been 26 years old today, July 21.

Dearer to us than words can tell, are memories of a husband, son and brother we loved so well. Who never knows a year ago, it was his last birthday with us. He was always so kind and gentle, with a heart as pure as gold. His equal in this world is hard to find. A wonderful person, who has gone from this earth, our Lord to be near. He lived, he died — everybody's friend.

Sadly missed by his Wife, Mother, Father, Brothers and Sisters.
